The terrorists are trying to create a climate of civil war and, thus, a revolutionary situation in which the present social and political order could be overthrown in favor of a Communist regime that would mix the characteristics of Castro's Cuba, Mao's China and Stalin's So-

Who are the terrorists, and how close to their objective have they come and why are the police so ineffective in controlling them?

.The terrorists have achieved a great deal from their point of view. They have killed 14 persons since the start of the year and wounded 23. They exacted recognition of sorts from Pope Paul VI and from Kurt Waldheim, the UN secretarygeneral, both of wbom sent personal messages to them.

Sustained Operation

In the Moro case, they demonstrated an ability to sustain a largescale operation for 54 days in spite of the mobilization of the nation's police against them.

But there is no civil war in Italy - not according to the dictionary. which defines civil war as a "war between different sections or parties within a country."

The Red Brigades is far from having a section of the country on its side. Politically, the slaying of ed with the abstract concept of po-litical violence find it impossible to endorse its bloody reality.

The terrorists, moreover, would have liked to provoke police repression as one of the surest means of creating a climate of armed combat in the country. But the regime recognized the trap and has so far

ROME. May 17 (NYT)—The its aftermath, four correspondents for The New York Times found a widespread feeling that Italian democracy bad reacted to the crisis with surprising cohesioo and vitality. A new public awareness has emerged. The economy, which was fragile long before the latest wave of terrorism, has been less affected than had been expected. The labor unions oot only are denouncing violence but have promised to work for greater labor efficiency.

But the outlook remains uncertain. There seems to be oo immediate cure for the country's underlying ills. Although the government has successfully reduced Italy's inflation, oo new policies or atti-tudes have emerged to help it cope with the problems of nearly 2 mil-lion unemployed, half of them young people, of hopelessly over-crowded universities or of long-due iudicial reform.

Overriding Question

And the overriding question, of course, remains: What will the terrorists do next?

The great fear is that the Red Brigades may be preparing a spec-tacular coup against another lead-ing political figure — something comparable to the explosion that killed Premier Luis Carrero Blanco of Spain in 1973. Officials concede that the Red Brigades has the capacity to strike again whenever it is

The Red Brigades is the largest and most effective of several terror-ist organizations in Italy. According to high police officials, it is organized into four main "columns" that operate independently but are former Premier Aldo Moro has linked to a central coordinating deepened its isolation because center and a political brain. The many leftist radicals who had flirt- columns are in Rome, Turin, Milan and Genoa, with smaller and less active groups in smaller cities.

The columns are mobile. Throughout the long, futile search for Mr. Moro, the police never were certain that the kidnapping in a residential area of the capital had been the work of the Rome column. It could have been done by a unit hased in northern Italy.

The Red Brigades took its basic structure from the Communistdominated resistance against the Germans and Mussolini's last-ditch "Social Republic" during the last year of World War II. In addition, an official said: "There is a how-todo-it literature by terrorists from Ulrike Meinhof to the Latin American Tupamaros and the national liberation movements in Africa and the Middle East, and these people have read it all. They are never making the same mistake twice." The hard core of the Red Brigades consists of 400 to 500 fulltime members who are on the pay-roll of the organization. Their sal-ary is 250,000 lire (about $400) a month, the minimum wage of an Italian worker. These are the disciplined, fanatical underground terrorists whose whole life is dedicated to the cause.

Zairians Reported Attacking Kolwezi

KINSHASA, Zaire, May 17 Moroccan troops airlifted to the key mining center of Kolwezi where about 3,000 foreigners are being held hostage by the rebels. Most Americans safely fled the war zone but 10 others were reportedly cut off by fighting.

Diplomatic sources said all communications with Kolwezi were cut and no news had been heard from the remainder of the foreigners trapped there since the weekend. The rebels reportedly sull hold the strategic Kolwezi airport and bos-

Yesterday, President Carter had ordered the 82d Airborne on alert for a possible airlift evacuation of Americans but the State Department spokesman said such a move was now no longer necessary.

The spokesman said about 78 Americans had been safely moved to the town of Musonoy, 60 miles west of Kolwezi. He said the remaining 10 Americans could not reach the trucks or belicopters to be evacuated and were still in the area. The Belgian and French governments drew up evacuation plans for their nationals. Diplomats said at least 11 foreigners had been killed in the fighting now in its sixth day. They included four Belgian mining officials and an Italian shot resisting a rebel who stole his car. The diplomats said many foreigners were grouped together in the Belgian-huilt John XXIII school with enough food and water to last only through tomorrow. Rally for Mobutu

In Kinshasha, thousands of Zairians, prodded by cadres from the ruling Popular Revolutionary Movement, crowded into the streets for a rally in support of President Mobutu Sese Seko. The Zaire ambassador to Morocco said government reinforcements from Lubumbashi, formerly Elizabethville and the capital of Shaba provioce, had arrived in Kolwezi and launched a counterattack against the invaders. Ambassador Lombo Lo Manga-manga said more than 2,000 regular Zairian troops had arrived overland from Luhumbashi, 200 miles east

Dominican Vote Count Reported Halted by Army

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominicao Republic, May 17 (AP)-The Dominican army halted vote counting in the presidential election early today but denied that it had seized control. The army intervened after challenger Antonio Guzman took a big lead over President Joaquin Balaguer.

American States in Washington said that OAS election observers on the scene reported that Mr. Balaguer had control of the government and indicated that he was ready to turn over power to Mr. Guzman if the opposition wins the election.

OAS sources said that elements of the national police, rather than the army, had halted the vote count. They said that the military was support ing Mr. Balaguer and had ordered the police to stop their intervention.

Vote tahulations resumed this morning, the OAS sources said, and results were expected to be announced this afternoon. The sources said that the motive for the police action was not clear, but they spoke of a long history of antagonism between the police leadership and the opposition Dominican Revolutionary Party. Large numbers of troops were in the streets of Santo Domingo as tension gripped the capital. Radio stations played popular music, interrupted only by the brief military communique, which gave no word on when counting would resume. Earlier reports said military officers invaded the headquarters of the Central Electoral Board, stopped the broadcasting of election results and the vote count and expelled everyone from the building. Reporters there said that the army later dismantled transmission equipment.

At the time, Mr. Guzman was leading Mr. Balaguer 326,076 votes to 218,073 in unofficial returns from the voting yesterday. This included about one-third of the vote cast in the capital.

Mr. Guzmao, candidate of the Dominican Revolutionary Party, was clearly the winner in Santo Domingo and was leading in Santiago, the country's second city, and smaller urhan centers in the country. But spokesmen for Mr. Balaguer's Reform Party contended that a large rural vote would offser Mr. Guzman's lead.

There were eight presidential candidates, but the race was between Mr. Guzman, a 67-year-old landowner and former minister of agriculture, and the 70-year-old President.

Mr. Balaguer campaigned on his record of political stability and economic recovery and charged that the Dominican Revolutionary Party would flirt with communism and socialism. Mr. Guzman accused Mr. Balaguer of allowing corruption during his 12 years in office and contended that economic recovery had not reached the masses, who had been hit by 20 percent unemployment and 16 percent inflation.

The government had wanted a metric system for measuring hardware, textiles and fabrics by the end of next year, with floor coverings to follow in February 1979; meat and fish in June 1981; other foodstuffs the following September and vegetables in December, 1981.

Overcooked Hamburgers May Create Cancer Agent

WASHINGTON, May 17 (1HT)—Hamhurger cooked too long at high temperatures may contain cancer-causing substances, but the extent of the risk is not yet known, a biologist said Monday.

Meanwhile, the federal government has proposed new regulations sharpty reducing the amount of so-dium nitrite used to cure bacon, because nitrites can combine with other substances at high temperatures to form cancer-causing

Assistant Agriculture Secretary Carol Tucker Foreman said that, beginning June 15, hacon processors will be limited to 120 parts per million of sodium nitrite, 60 perceot of the current limit.

The hamburger threat cannot be fully assessed according to Dr. Barry Commoner of Washington University in St. Louis, until the exact composition of the potentially carcinogenic substances has been cetermined and tests on animals can be performed.

NEW YORK, May 17-(AP-DJ)-U.S. health officials are investigating aflegations by aircraft maintenance workers at Hill Air Force Base near Ogden, Utah, that exposures to toxic chemicals have

Dr. Commoner said that research has shown that the substanees, called mutagens, may develop in hamhurger cooked at high temperatures, which most often occur with frying pans and electric grills (both small and restaurant-size units).

Dr. Commoner, who is known as an environmentalist, said the temperature needed to cook hamburger with those devices is much bigher than that necessary with radiant heat in broilers and that develoed by some microwave ovens without browning trays. Apparently the critical factors are the cooking temperature and the time of cooking. Dr. Commoner said. Mutagens, he said, are agents that can cause genetic changes. Sci-entists say that almost all mutagens also are capable of causing cancer. The proposed action against so-dium nitrite in bacon would not have much effect immediately, because most bacon processors al-ready operate within the lower limspokesman. But the proposal would cut the new limit a year later to 40 parts per million — 20 percent of the current limit.

Sodium nurite has been used for centuries as a food preservative. But laboratory tests have shown that nitrites can combine with other substances, particularly at high temperatures (as when bacon is fried), to form nitrusamioes, substances that have caused cancer in

Peruvians Riot As Prices Rise

LIMA. May 17 (AP)-Police dispersed demonstrators in at least five cities yesterday as Peruvians reacted to increased prices for gasoline, bus fares and basic foodstuffs. Schools and universities were shut down nationwide until further notice. A 24-hour strike by Communist-led bank employees was outlawed by the military regime.

The protests erupted against a 66-percent increase in gasoline prices, a 50-percent rise in urban bus fares, and the dropping of state subsidies on basic foodstuffs such as condensed milk, coodles, cooking oil and bread.

Street clashes between workers and police and a protest march organized by striking bank employees virtually paralyzed Arequipa, a city of 500,000.

Henry Gives Doctor Runaround Before Submitting to Operation

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M., May 17 (UPI)—Henry's operation for removal of an orange-sized tumor was a success, thanks to a well-placed tranquilizer and the chief surgeon's fleet feet.

Henry is a 1,200-pound carnel who lives at the city zoo and — as veterinarian Bret Snyder learned — Henry is rather ornery.

Zoo officials recently discovered the turnor in the carnel's neck and set up an operation with Dr. Soyder. But getting Henry to cooperate proved to be tough.

Dr. Snyder first tried the gentle approach as he attempted to administer a tranquilizer. But he found out that "you can't just walk up and give a camel a shot."

It took six zookeepers to bold Henry down with ropes while Dr.

Snyder finished administering the sedative. Once Henry went to sleep on bales of hay, it did not take the veterinarian loog to remove the tumor.

Soviet Doctor Replies on Child

MOSCOW, May 17 (AP)-A Soviet doctor contends that the U.S. press has been seeking to make a "hullabaloo" over a 7-month-old baby whose parents say the child requires special medical treatment in the United States, Tass reported

The oews agency carried the doctor's rebuttal to a series of U.S. stories concerning the case of Jessi-ca Katz, who suffers from a rare infant disease that seriously impairs the baby's digestive system. The child's parents, Boris and Natalya Katz, say Soviet officials have turned down repeated requests to allow the child to be brought to the United States for treatment. As a stopgap measure, a doctor at Children's Hospital Medical Ceoter in Boston has sent to Moscow a supply of special artificially predigested food providing the baby with necessary outrients.

U.S. Western-Style Gear Stars in First Paris Fair

By Hebe Dorsey

DARIS, May 17 (1HT)-American Western fashions are making their first run in Paris. As of yesterday and until Friday, some 28 U.S. companies, grouped under the label of the American West Overseas Association, are holding a fair at the U.S. Trade Center at Neutly, on the western edge of Paris. Mostly from Oklahoma, Colorado and Wyoming, with the fide a few from California, they sell material a few from California as their press release outs it.

That includes riding equipment, and sewn mocassins, Western handsewn mocassins. Western boots, bolo ties, silver buckles and Navaho jewels, with several Navaho demonstrating dressing techniques on the spot.

The exhibition will then move to Loodon, said Bill Kickroeger, the quiet. 10-gallon-topped executive director of the exhibition. The idea of the show, he said, was to make life easier for European buyers, who have been coming in increas-ing numbers to the Western fairs, held twice a year.

At each fair, we were registering anywhere from two to 300 buyers from the Coatment," he said. We noted 300 advance registrations, so far," he said, "mostly French but also a lot from West

He also beloed organize the exhibition, he added. His stores oo the boulevards are called, L'Americain and General Store. His calling cards feature a big American flag and an old-fashioned picture of a Western store and a stagecoach.

Right after that, you have boots, belts and then shirts. But the French like their boots different from the Americans—they want very pointed toes and very high heels (whereas American cowboys wear lower heels and rounder toes.) The French want everything as they see it in the movies," Mr. Denos added, "The Westerns are-our greatest piece of advertisement."

The silver buckle stand was impressive, with dozens of patterns, including Polled Hereford Head. Bareback Rider, Bull Rider and Saddle Bronc. But there were also some plain ones for people to engrave their oames. The same outfit also offered silver belt points and bolo ties with silver slides.

The buck-stitched, multicolored leather belt would also be an immediate winner with any French teenager. Some were really gaudy, with he name outlined on a yellow, iridescent background.

Finally, both the silver and tur-quoise jewlery and the Western craft corner (which included painting on old barn wood) were a good notch above what one usually sees even in U.S. curio shops. The only thing that exhibition oeeds is to be more widely advertised.

"In London, we'll have a fullscale advertising campaign," Mr. Kiekroeger said, "But here, it's a little more low-key, but that seems to be the style."

Given the amount of U.S. surplus stores around Paris, it is hard to imagine at first what could be introduced into the market that is new. However, the goods on display at the fair have a genuine, un-mistakable raw beauty often lacking in second-hand stores. The authentic leather chaps and vests, for instance, were snapped up by a rid-ing club outside Paris that has 5,000 members specializing in riding Western style. They came in this morning,"

Mr. Kiekroeger said. One of the saddles on display, called the McClellan saddle, is a re-plica of the U.S. Cavalry saddle used during the Indian wars.

Dutch School Talks Working-Class Street Language

By Jonathan Kandell

MSTERDAM, May 17 A (NYT)—Ton Bax balanced himself on the edge of the table above the third graders sprawled out on pillows below and asked how they had spent the evening before. The answers tumbled forth in the staccato language of north Amsterdam's blue-collar district, flashing quick sketches of working-class home life: a family quarrel, the same noodle-and-meatball dish three nights in a row, a father who had not yet found a job.

Bax, smiling impassively, made no attempt to correct the grammar or soften the expletives. Although only vaguely aware of what be was looking for, he settled on an 8-yearold's recounting of a television program on shyness.

"Shyness-let's talk about what being shy means to you," said the teacher. A boy explained that his hrother was too shy to call his older sister at work for fear that her employer would answer instead. He oot know why his brother should be so timid about speaking to a boss, but he was. He stuttered and squeaked, said the pupil, who collapsed in giggles.

That afternoon, the class would write about sbyness, adding another chapter to the "Book on Me" that each of them kept. Anthologies like these become the main texts at the Azalea School. Written in ungrammatical, even pungent, phoneuc prose, they are the tools for teaching standard middle-class lan-guage, "raising the consciousness" of blue-collar children and closing the performance gap between them and pupils from more affluent reighborhood schools.

In Western Europe, as well as in mobiles hang from the ceilings. the United States, teachers, sociologists and governments have mounted a drive during the last decade to tional difficulties of working-class or minority-group children. In some cases, this has merely involved additional investment in money, equipment, building and remedial classes. Sometimes an effort is made to achieve a social or cultural mix in schools that is thought to encourage better academic performances among underprivileged students.

In other instances, attempts are made to establish a closer connec-tion between the child's experiences at home and at school. The assumption is that lagging educational levels among students are largely caused by their bafflement and in-difference to the teaching, and even the language, in conventional class-

This approach has been tried in Britain, northern Italy and parts of France. But nowhere has it been as successful or pervasive as io this Dutch metropolis, where it passes under the name of "Innovation Project Amsterdam." With 80 schools—more than half of the city's working-class district elementary schools—using the methods applied by Bax and his students at Azalea, the Innovation Project Amsterdam has gone beyood the experimental stage and has been wholeheartedly emhraced hy city and national authorities, teachers and parents.

Some of the features of the oject are common to such schools in the United States and elsewhere. Groups of four desks bave replaced rows facing the hlackboard. Paper

"Easy corners" with floor pillows encourage informal conversation. A duck or cat wanders through the grapple with the troubling educa- rooms, and fish dart through aquariums.

But few other working-class school programs pursue with such relentless zeal the goal of matching lessons to everyday life. The homes and streets in the improvised texts look like the neighborhoods that the pupils inhabit. Discussions of career possibilities draw parents to the classrooms and take students to their families' work places. And no effort is made by teachers to dissuade students from using the same language they speak outside the

No inhibitions

"We feel the most important thing is to first get the students to express themselves without inhihitions in speech and writing," said Anne Marie Noot, a researcher with the project. "Once the desire to speak or write is brought out, we can eventually teach them 'correct' middle-class language."

Autohiographies written by the students at the Rozenburg School. for example, may lack syntax, but often attain a simple eloquence.

"My mother did not know whether I was a boy or girl," wrote a 7-year-old girl describing her "zero year." "When I came along, I was laying in the hospital very soon in the 'cubator.' Because of the milk that stuck me in the throat almost to death, I became a beautiful

The Innovation Project approach has not dramaucally erased the gap between working-class children and pupils from more affluent social backgrounds. But reading and writ ing levels in the blue-collar school have risen, and the number of pu pils that fall behind has been re duced substantially. The project was inspired, mon by chance than by design, sever years ago when middle-class radi cals moved into Amsterdam's west ern hlue-collar districts in search of cheaper housing and closer contact with working-class families.

Van Calcur and his friends took close look at the schools, decided that the curriculum and teaching methods were more deficient than the students, and set about trying to revamp the educational system.

What was the sense of leaching them language they never heard at home or ou the streets? If they were to learn reading, writing and arithmetic, we had to orient them to their own everyday experi-

Worse, the House now seems to be endorsg that Korean intransigence. Ethics Committee members and Leon Jaworski, the committee's special counsel, had sought to strike back at South Korea quickly. Rep. Bruce Caputo, the New York Republican, pressed for a House vote on a Korean aid question on the theory that a vote to cut aid would send the necessary signal to Seoul. But the vote went the other way - and by a fat margin at that, 256 to 126.

The House needs to take prompt corrective action, perhaps in the form of a new resolution urging South Korea to make Kim Dong Jo available for questioning. Otherwise, it creates two impressions. One, in Seoul, is that the heat is off. That impression would be unfortunate. The second is that the Representatives think the heat's off them too; that the public has lost interest in the gross effort to buy Congress. That impres-

Uranium Fuel for India

Why the President has now agreed to send 16.800 pounds of uranium fuel to India — a nation which has rejected formal restrictions on the use of nuclear fuel and facilities - is completely baffling. It may be that India, as New Delhi says, will not use the fuel for nuclear arms, but that is hardly enough assurance to justify evading reasonable conditions. Permitting the new shipment flies di-rectly in the face of Mr. Carter's own policy, and it is obvious, since India has its own reprocessing equipment and has already exploded one nuclear device, that Indian scientists have the capacity to fashion atomic weapons. Congress has nearly two months in which it can veto the fuel sale to India by resolution of both huuses. The legislators have defied the President unfairly on several occasions as a result of constituent or lobby pressures but, in this instance, they would be amply justified in aborting the sale until the Indian government accepts satisfactory safeguards in its use of American nuclear fuel. -From the Toledo (Ohio) Blode.

Sadat's Proposal

Perhaps the biggest problem the Arabs and Israelis have to settle is what to do about the Palestinian refugees. Israel has been adamantly against the formation of a Palestinian state on its borders because Israel believes that would be a recipe for many more generations of conflict.

Now President Sadat has offered some ideas that may case Isracli fears about a Palestinian state. He has suggested that the fsraelioccupied West Bank of the Jordan River, formerly Jordan territory, and the Gaza Strip, a small area along the Mediterranean coast between Israel and the occupied Egyptian Sinai, might be returned to those countries as an interim step toward peace. The implication apparently is that Egypt and Jordan would play roles in those territories. Sadat has criticized an Israeli proposal for Palestinian civil self-rule while Israel maintained a military presence as a way "to legalize the Israeli occupation.

Sadat's suggestions were vague, but, coming as they did on the eve of Israel's celcbration_of its independence, clearly indicated the Egyptian leader's continued commitment to keep the peace hopes alive. - From the Atlanto Constitution.

Exports to South Africa

The House will soon vote on legislation that would bar the Export-Import Bank from supporting any U.S. exports to South Africa until that nation makes "significant prog-ress" toward majority rule. The actual impact of such a move would be small, but it should be made to offer a tangible piece of evidence to the government in Pretoria that it cannot simply outlast the Carter Administration and its lofty rhetoric about human rights, that the American people are united in their repulsion at apartheid. All sorts of objections are almost certain to be raised on the House floor. The move will politicize the bank's operations, it will be said. It is hard to see, however, why denying South Africa loan guarantees is political while advancing them is apolitical. In world affairs, almost any government action has a political significance.

There are other things to be said as well. For instance, direct Ex-fm aid to South Africa has been barred for 14 years and what is proposed now — at the instigation of Rep. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass. — is simply a rightening of policy to end the $200 million of indirect assistance to the country via Ex-Im guarantees and insurance for loans obtained from private banks by South African purchasers of U.S. goods. But those are all rather narrow, technical arguments. More important in this case is a matter of principle. It is time for the United States, through its government, to go beyond rhetoric and take a tangible step to express its abhorrence at the official, degrading, inhuman racism of South Africa. -From the Boston Globe.

The Trial of Yuri Orlov

Dr. Yuri Orkov Ja dissident on trial in Moscow] . . . could end with a sentence of seven years in a labor camp and with Siberian exile to follow . . . Dr. Orlov is a perfectly ordinary physician without known political amhitions but with an abiding interest in liberty. His alleged crime is to have slandered the Soviet Union and its social and economic system by calling in question its adherence to the principles laid down - and accepted by the Soviet government - in Basket Three of the Helsinki Agreement. Basket Three says, essentially, that people should be allowed freely to associate, that they should be allowed freely to express their opinions, and that there should be room for an opposition as well as for a government in every country which signed the agreement. Dr. Orlov was the spokesman for many Soviet citizens who questioned whether the Soviet government had abided by the Helsinki agreement. That is the charge against him in its miserable and shameful entirety Part of Dr. Orlov's tragedy is that he, like many others, took Basket Three to mean what it said. The Western statesmen who signed the Helsinki agreement bear part of the responsibility for what is happening to him now, in a furtive trial in a closed courtroom, in a Moscow suburb. From the Guardian (London).

But all this provides only the ex-ternal setting for Peking's own de-bate on how to handle China's rela-

The right-wing policy of modernization is urged by Teng. The left-wing policy of sticking to socialist principles is favored by Hua. The extreme-left policy of reviving Mao's radical program is advocated by the many followers of the "Gang of Four" who are being constantly denounced by the Chinese press. Even though the "Gang," led by Mao's wife, was overthrown af-

John Hay Whitney

ONDON-For five and twenty centuries man has been trying to puzzle out whether to limit births or to be fruitful and multiply. In the Western world the first recorded reference to the debate was in the Greek epic. Cypria, written in the sixth century B.C. It observes that Zeus "stirred up the Trojan war to relieve the world of overpopulation." Birth control itself is an ancient science. Female contraceptive prac-tices were described by Aristotle.

The Picture

Is Not So

Bleak on

Population

By Jonathan Power

Surprisingly, male contraceptives were unknown to the ancient world and were not mentioned until 1564.

Whatever the problems of particular epochs, cities or countries, it is only in the last 30 years that the world as a whole has become more fully aware of the problem of uncontrolled population increase. Geometric growth, that silent but dangerous mathematical phenomenon, has suddenly landed on our doorstep the exploding results of centuries of accelerating increases. Combined with the end of the age

Combined with the end of the age of exploration, which for so long acted as the safety valve for overpopulation, it has presented this generation with a frightening inheritance and a heavy responsibility.

"Sbort of thermonuclear war itself, population growth is the gravest issue the world faces"—the voice of Robert McNamara in a lecture at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology last year, "Indeed in many ways," he added, "rampant population growth is an even more dangerous and subtle threat to the world than thermonuclear war, for it is intrinsically less clear war, for it is intrinsically less subject to rational safeguards, and less amenable to organized

Not as Bleak

In fact the situation is not quite as bleak as it was a mere five years ago. New evidence, recently collat-ed, suggests that the much births has begun to fall in countries where a decline in the birthrate had been considered unlikely. Moreover the decline appears to be gathering momentum. It is countries like India, Indonesia, Egypt and Korea that have made the significant advances, although it is still true there are too many developing countries making little or no signilicant progress,

If progress is possible, then the question is how to spread and accelerate it. In the countries with the best records, what were the ingredients of their success?

It has proved impossible to establish with quantitative details a socioeconomic threshold where the fall in the birthrate begins. In the United States the fall in birthrate figures only began when the average income had reached a relatively high level, while in Korea, Sri Lanka and laiwan the fall started when per capita income was still below $200. China started the process with an even lower level of average income.

Nevertheless, there is a common factor. In nearly all countries with falling birth figures the process was initiated when the majority of the population began to receive a share of the improvements to the social and economic condition. According to William Rich of the Overseas Development Council, this is true for a broad spectrum of countries with such varying conditions as Taiwan, China, South Korea, Singapore, Hong Kong, Uruguay, Costa Rica and Sri Lanka. Conversely, in countries with rel-atively high economic growth, but where the benefits of growth are oot available to a wide section of the population, the birthrates remain high, as, for example, in Venezuela and Mexico. The decisive factor appears to be not the level of gross national product but the degree of income distribution.

MeNamara in his MIT speech quoted a study of 40 developing countries. It showed that an in-crease of $10 in the income of the lowest 60 percent of the income strata, when linked with advances in nutrition, health and literacy. was associated with a crude birthrate decline of seven-tenths per 1,000. But a $10 increase in the overall average income of everyone was associated with a crude birthrate decline of only three-tenths per 1,000.

In Hellenistic society in the sec-ond century B.C., only 1 percent of families reared more than one daughter. A crude kind of population control was practiced infanticide of unwanted girls. Mankind has come a long way since those days. It has a relatively painless cure for the population prob-lem within its grasp. The question is whether we will use it. If we do not, we may pay a price which will make the Greeks seem relatively farsighted in comparison.

Why The Morgan Bank is a leader in Euro-syndications

When a government, or a government agency, or a multinational corporation turns to the Euro-currency market for financing, it expects discretion, innovation, and speed. In the past year The Morgan Bank's Euro-syndication specialists consistently met all three criteria in managing or co-managing over $10 billion in loans to countries and companies.

Morgan has Euro experts in the world's major money centers. They keep in close touch—by telephone and travel. This means they have a total market view at all times, and can give the borrower speedy decisions at each step in the negotiation of a complex deal.

To set up a major Euro-currency financing, a bank has to know all the sources of funds, have access to them, and be imaginative in choosing among them. Morgan's experience has earned it the highest respect among important lenders and Euro-credit managers. They value our thoroughness in preparing loan documentation and our skill in shaping and managing a financing.

That skill is especially important to the borrower. It insures that terms, maturity, and options are tailored to the purpose of the loan and to market conditions.

Euro-syndications with Morgan flexibility meet a wide range of needs: short-term working capital loans to finance trade: medium-term revolving credits for corporations or for countries with development needs; longer-term financing for projects which generate the funds for repayment. We provide these for governments, state-owned corporations, nationalized industries, central banks, and many of the world's largest companies.

Evidence of 'Demand Pull'

U.S. Inflation Pace Is Seen Shifting

LOS ANGELES, May 17—Evidence is mounting that the cause of U.S. inflation is shifting from an increase in the cost of producing goods to a "de-mand pull," or production lagging behind consumers demand forcing up prices.

Fear of such an inflation played a major part in the Carter administation's call for wage and price restraint, and in the Federal Reserve Board's recent actions to stem the growth of the money sup-

Demand pull can be a more virulent form of inflation because it can accelerate suddenly, obli-terating hard-fought gains in wages and income. It is a signal that the economy is overheated and headed for trouble and is aften accompanied by high interest rates and reduced credit which lead to a decline in growth. This eventually leads to a recession.

What has economists worried is the unexpected decrease in the unemployment rate last month to 6 percent of the work firce, combined with an ex-pected runup in the rate of manufacturing capacity utilization to 85 percent by year end—only two percentage points below the rate that forces most industries to activate absolute or inefficient plants and equipment

Near Peak Potential

Tngether, the figures indicate that the demand for goods and services has pushed the economy near its highest productive potential, even though millions of U.S. residents are out of work. Most economists contend that vast numbers of women and teen-agers have recently swillen the amount of available labor beyond the economy's capacity to

There are still few signs of the kind of severe supply crunch which contributed to double-digit inflation four years ago. The paper industry is beinflation four years ago. The paper industry is be-ginning to experience some bottlenceks, and spe-cialized industries such as semiconductor manufac-turers are struggling to find skilled workers. But many major industries, including automobile and steel, still bave room for growth. Foreign econo-mies also have some productive slack which did not exist in 1973-74,

Still, government statistics show that the U.S. economy's output is not keeping pace with demand. Productivity, n measure of economic production divided by hours worked, is already declining. The Labor Department calculated a 3.6-per-cent drop in the annual rate of productivity in the first quarter of 1978, the largest quarterly drop in four years. A spurt in production rates can be expected in the second quarter following the severe Eastern winter, but the overalt trend is toward smaller production gains.

A Stronger Role

The result is inflation. During the first quarter, prices rose at an annual rate of over 9 percent, compared to 6.5 percent for all of 1977. How much nf that inflatinn was due to the productivity squeeze is unknown. But "demand pull" is clearly taking a stronger rnle.

"The prospects of continued strong consumer demand compared to tightening credit and tighten-ing productive capacity is really scary." said Virginia Rogers, a seninr econnmist at Data Resources, Inc. Adds Nnrmen Robertson, ehief economist at Mellon Bank in Pittsburgh: "The economy, in shart, is within hailing distance of its capacity ceiling."
As always, when it comes to economic forecasting, there are a few dissenters. And there are some cross-currents that could lessen inflationary pressure in the coming months. The value of the dollar is apparently stabilizing in foreign-exchange trad-ing, oil prices have not been raised by the petrole-um exporting nations and the dislocations of winter could give way to slower price inereases in the spring, a repeat of the events of 1977.

"There is ton much scare talk," said Charles Reeder, chief economist at Du Pont Co. "It takes an awful lot of price pressure just to keep inflation at 6 percent." Inflation will be accelerating this year, says Walter Heller, economic adviser to Presidents Keanedy and Johnson, but "I don't think the evidence shows it is demand pull. There is still quite a bit of flexibility in the economy, and plenty of capacity that can be tapped overseas."

Japan Holds 80% in U.S. Copier Market

NEW YORK, May 17 (AP-DJ)-Following the pattern of their triumphs with cameras, small cars and television sets, the Japanese in just five years, have come from nowhere to an 80-percent share in 1977 of all new business in a fastgrowing part of the office-copier industry; the low-priced, low-volune machines that make copies on ordinary paper.

The extent of the slowdown is somewhat exaggerated by the Japanese government figures as Ricob has been slowly switching some of its copier production from Japan to a plant in California. And while Canon is increasing production slightly, all of the increase is being made at its West German factories. Yet industry observers are convinced the slowdown is real.

Several forces are behind this. One is the Japanese government, which, as part of its effort to reduce the huge surplus in its international accounts, has asked makers to hold exports of plain-paper copiers this

Kodak Cites Far East Competition

Kodak claims it is losing ground to Asian imports in its efforts to retain the lion's share of the amateur

In addition, the Japanese have developed very fast machines that are potential competitors for the lucrative duplicator market currently divided among Kodak, International Business Machines and Xerox.

1977 was another good year for Ennia, one of the largest insurance groups in the Netherlands. Income increased from each of our three main areas of business, continuing our record of balanced overall growth both at home and overseas. Between 1973 and 1977, total receipts have risen from Dfl.906m to Dfl.1,850m, an annual average increase of 20%

Profits have made good progress too: from Dfl.22.2m in 1973 to Dfl.42.9m last year.

We propose a dividend for 1977 of Dfl. 7.50 (1976: Dfl.6.50) per ordinary share of Dfl.20.

Strength through diversification We operate internationally in three main areas: life assurance, general insurance and some non-insurance but related fields such as personal loans. mortgages, property development and holiday centres—where our marketing strength, expertise in investment analysis and property management can be profitably employed.

Life assurance accounted for 61% of our business last year gross receipts have risen from Dfi.631m in 1973 to Dfl.1,125m in 1977.

General insurance produced 32% of our income in 1977 and has increased from Dfl.242m to Dfl.596m in the past five years. Results were an improvement on the previous year. Other countries and inward reinsurance have performed well.

Non-insurance activities have grown to 7% of our business, from Dfl.33m in 1973 to Dfl.128m in 1977.

Further growth overseas At the moment, most of our revenue is generated within the Netherlands, a home market that provides, overall, a sound and profitable base. But our overseas strength is developing well. We have offices, subsidiaries and affiliates in the United Kingdom. Belgium, the United States, the Carribbean, Republic of Surinam and the Middle East. They now contribute 20% of our total gross receipts (1976: 18%) and we plan to increase that percentage still further. Overall Ennia have a record of producing sustained, balanced growth at home and in other countries to the benefit of both shareholders and policyholders. Our results, just released, show the picture: with gross receipts, net profit and dividends all increasing. For a copy of our Report and Accounts for 1977 please post the coupon below.

CAN YOU SELECT STOCKS THAT RISE OVER 300%? Did you ever wish you could pick out a stock like this before the big rise?

This is not an isolated example. The method of stock sele tion presented in this study has identified more than 600 cases like E-Systems over the past 40 years. These stocks, on average, rose more than 300% within about three years from their theoretical date of purchase. The method requires no specialized knowledge of mathematics or economics. It is easy to understand and easy to apply.

What about today? More than 200 stocks currently meet the same basic criteria as E-Systems. NON-RANDOM PROFITS will show you EXACTLY how to

General Manager

Mechanical and Electrical Contracting Joint Venture Saudi Arabia c.£20,000

Our client, a joint venture company, established profitable and operating a number of Electrical Contracting projects in the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia, now requires a General Manager to play the key role in an ambitious growth programme.

The primary requirement is a mature, professional Manager, with a solid electrical contracting background and a record of success in a General Management role in the Middle East. The ability to work effectively with local partners, clients and staff is crucial. Strong commercial and management skills must be allied to a practical technical approach. We envisage candidates being aged between 35-50 and interested in consolidating previous overseas experience into a first line management role in a growing

A very attractive remuneration package is offered for an initial 3 year contract. It includes emolument of approximately £20,000, although this is by no means a ceiling for outstanding men. A generous and broad range of benefits is offered on either married or bachelor status and will include accommodation, a car medical/sickness insurance, life assurance, assistance in schooling and ample leave.

DEATH AFTER BREAKFAST By Hugh Pentecost. Dodd, Mead. 188 pp. $6.95

WHAT to read instead of the Nixon memoirs? Three old hands are back this month with new pots off the mystery-fiction wheel.

There is, of course, a horse in Dick Francis's "Risk." Francis, the British former jockey who turned into a thriller writer 18 books and into a thriller writer 18 books and 18 years ago, always has horses in his novels. This horse, Tapestry, jumps over hurdles with a mini-mum of help from an amateur joc-key, Roland Britten, who in real life is a certified accountant. The damndest thing happens to Britten after almost every race: He is ab-ducted and stashed in some dark place for several days, such as the hold of a boat oo its way to Minor-ca, or the back of a van in a warehouse in Newbury.

Uoderstandahly, Britten wooders why. Perhaps less understandahly, the police aren't much interested because, after all, he hasn't been harmed. As usual in a Francis thriller, there is a conspiracy—not to rule or ruin the world, but to defraud it. As usual, we are misled as to the identities of the conspirators; we wander around with a wary eye among the incidental characters, but Francis is too clever for us. As usual, ordinary men and women arrive hy logic, not derring-do, at the unsavory truth.

Francis, naturally, is very good oo horses and stables and the steeplechase. He is also very good on claustrophobia. His characters, except for the obligatory iogenue, are round, and tick like alarm clocks. And he is especially fine oo moory—the way it moves around, in and out of pockets and accounting books. Money is the drama of "Risk." Francis addicts will be surprised to learn that he represses his odd streak of sadism unol page 230. Francis addicts will not be surprised to learn that, as always, he plays fair with the reader.

It seems to me that Michael Innes hasn't played fair with the reader in quite a while. "Honey-bath's Haven" is the 30th mystery by Innes, who is in real life J.I.M. Stewart reader in English Literature at Oxford University and the author of books on Shakespeare, Kipling, Conrad and Hardy. The best of his mysteries, such as "Hamlet, Revenge!," have comhined an ingenious plot with wit-and sensibility and Appleby. The worst have left the ingenuity oul of the plot. The ingenuity has been left out of the plots in his last live. books. "Honeybath's Haven even leaves out Appleby.

Well it begins nicely. We first met Honeybath, the portrait paint-er and Royal Academician, in The Myslerious Commission." He is a plausible repository of Innes's (or Stewart's) opinions on art and literature. His one-time friend and fel-low artist, the unconventional Edwin Lightfoot, seems to be cracking up. Honeybath ottempts to help inspire some iotimations of his own mortality, or, at least, retirement. He has arranged to retire himself at Hanwell Court, an expensive last watering-hole for the elderly. The eccentric and the well-to-do. He talks Lightfoot into taking his place at Hanwell Court, and Lightfool dies mysteriously.

Lightfoot is murdered, in fact. What are we to make of his last sketches, and of the sudden surfacing of paintings belonging in style to his period of youthful genius? (I am reminded of a covel Stewart wrote under his own name some years ago: "The Last Tresilians.") Hanwell Court has more dotty suspects than any English country house ever devised by Agatha Christie. All this, listlessly, sorts itself out. The guilty party, alas, is simply too peripheral to the main concerns of the book-art and old age—and too hastily introduced to engage the imagination. While the prose, as ever, is 19th-century charming, and the allusions, as expected, are winning and erudite the plot is doddering and arhitrary. Innes, or Stewart, would have been better off writing a straightforward novel, leaving the killing to those who care. Hugh Pentecost has perpetrated 20 mysteries, most of them featuring the Nero Wolfe look-alike Pierre Chambrun, resideot manager of the luxury Hotel Beaumont in New York, with the hotel public relations man, Mark Haskell, as the Archie Goodwin of the operation. (Pentecost has a oother series devoted to Julian Quist, who is a "mod young public relations genius," whereas Haskell emphatically is oot.) The trouble with "Death After Breakfast" is that, for the most part, Chambruo isn't around, hav-ing beeo abducted like Roland Britten in "Risk," only to New Jersey instead of Minorca.

This is trouble because Pentecost writes his prose with flat feet; he oeeds the eccentricities of Chambrun to rouse us from torpor. He also oeeds the absorbing details of hotel management that have made his earlier mysteries work. A jet-set-ting nymphomaniac has been hutchered oo the eve of a charity ball, in the vicinity of a compound of Otto Preminger and Roman Polanski, to the infinite distress of a female gossip columnist, and routine obtains.

Conductor Set In Minneapolis

MINNEAPOLIS, May 17 (NYT)—Neville Marriner has been named to succeed Stanislaw Skrowaczewski as music director of the Minnesota Orchestra in Minneapolis. He is to take over at the start of the 1979-80 season.

Klaus Tennstedt, the German maestro, will be principal guest conductor in 1979-80, and Leonard Slatkin, now principal guest con-ductor, will be artistic director for the summer season.

The Minnesota Orchestra, previously known as the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, was orga-nized in 1903.

Mr. Marricer, who is English is 53 years old. He began his career as a violinist and formed a chamber ensemble called St. Martin-in-the Fields, whose recordings under his leadership oumber about 200. In 1969 he formed the Los Angeles Chamber Orchestra, which he still conducts.

MONTREAL, May 17 (UPI)—Guy Lafleur scored the winning goal at 13:09 of the first overtime period last night, helping the Montreal Canadiens take a 2-0 lead in their best-of-seven Stanley Cup final by defeating the Boston Bruins, 3-2,

The victory enabled the Canadiens to establish a record for the longest consecutive winning streak in Stanley Cup finals. Montreal has won 11 straight final series games. The Canadiens last were defeated in the finals on May 8, 1973, when Chicago scored an 8-7 vietory.

Lasleur took a right-wing pass from desenseman Larry Robinson just inside the bluelioe, skated two steps and drilled a 40-font wide-angle shot past Boston goalie Gerry Cheevers' oear side.

The series switches to Boston for the third game tomorrow night.

Rick Smith had tied the game at 15:48 of the third period with his first playoff goal. He was fed a pass in front of the net by Wayne Cashman and Smith banged the puck into the corner of the cage to the left of goalie

Bob Gainey had given Mootreal a 2-1 lead when he scored on a high 40-

NFL Player Group Accuses League of Deception Article 15 gives NFL teams the "right of first refusal," which means MINNEAPOLIS, May 17 (AP)—The National Football League used

'deliberate, deceitful" tactics last year to fool the NFL Players Associatioo ioto thinking that its new collective bargaining agreement was better than the old so-called Rozelle rule, attorney Edward Glennoo charged

"Defraud was committed by the NFL on Judge Earl Larson," said Glennon. "Judge Larson did not have before him all the facts. It was a deliberate, deceitful force of action by the NFL." Glennoo, representing the player association, spoke before the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals and asked that the agreement be sent back to U.S. District Judge Larson for further investigation. By not informing the court of its interpretation of Article 15, Glennoo said, the owners and league tricked the players into accepting an agreement "worse than the Rozelle rule. And that's the deceil." that a club can bind a player who plays out his option and receives another offer by matching the offer, or paying that player 110 per cent of his previous salary, whichever is higher.

This, says the player association, creates a perpetual option-reserve clause and is no better than the old rule, which was struck down in 1975 when the court ruled that it unreasonably restricted player movement. "Article 15 constitutes a perpetual option clause more onerous than the Rozelle rule," argued Gerald Tockman, who represented a small group of players who were opposed to the agreement from the beginning. "It appears the union misunderstood what they signed when they negotiated the agreement," Tockman said.

The Rozelle rule gave commissioner Pete Rozelle the power to determine compensation to teams who lost free agents to other teams.

"The young millionaire has been like noted for spending money like water. Last month he took a movie actress to dinner and they both had T-bone steaks. When the papers got wind of it. Percival was indignant and said, 'It's my money and I can do anything I want with it. Just because most people can't afford Tbone steaks is no reason why I can't can one if I feel like it."

"Percical was left a fortune of $20 million, which his hankers estimate is now down to five. One of the trustees told this reporter. The man has no idea that if he keeps spending at the present rate, he wen't have anything left in two years. The Imperial Design for Washington

By Wolf Von Eckardt

WASHINGTON (WP)—The original design for the U.S. Capitol, which George Washington and Thomas Jeffersoo enthusiastically approved, was different from what the history books tell us. It also implied a somewhat different form of gov-ernment, reflecting the Federalist view of an Imperial Presidency.

Recent, as yet unpublished research has brought to light that the first sketches called for a dominant Conference Room adjacent to a spacious office for the president, called the President's Apartment. The House and Senate chambers were relegated to secondary importance.

The round Conference Room, which a Boston newspaper described at the time as "an Audience Room," protruded to the western edge of what is oow called Capitol Hill. It was topped by a tower. To the east of it, under a second, shallow dome, was a vestibule. The towering composition, 160 feet high, would bave dominated the Mall and the city, much as the Capitol does today.

The design was by William Thornton, the first architect of the Capitol, who was also a physician, portrait painter and steamboat engioeer. But the design was inspired, it oow appears, hy Maj. Pierre Charles L'Enfant, Washington city planner and friend and protege of George Washiogton, although there is oo direct evidence of this. L'Enfant's architectural sketches are lost.

Thornton's official design, at any event, reflected the views of the Federalist party, which called for a strongly centralized lederal government led hy an all-powerful presi-dent. As the Federalist influence receded, particularly after Washiogton's death in 1799, the Capitol design was correspondingly modified—"republicanized," one might

The tower-topped Conference Room had not yet been huilt when the British burned the Capitol in 1812. Instead, the House and Senate wings were connected by a temporary, wooden walkway. After the fire, Benjamin Latrobe took over as architect and plans were changed because political senti-ment had changed. The Federalist Confer-ence Room was omitted and the vestibule became what Jeffersoo called "a hall of the people...for impeachment and public ceremonies." The hall is now called the foremost U.S. architectural historians.

Preparing a "visual hiography" of the Capitol. Lowry came across the original layout for the huilding's central section in the Library of Congress. It shows the founda-tion stakes, including the foundations for the circular Conference Room. Drawings of it had been known, but dismissed as alternative or prelimioary designs. The foundatioo stakes indicate that the Federalist tower was actually to be built.

The design of the Capitol was the result of an architectural competition advertised by the commissioners of the federal city in the oation's newspapers in 1792. The winner was promised $500 and a city lot. The results were dismal. One designer proposed to house Congress in a giant weathervane. As so often happens in Washington, the commissioners met the problem by doing noth-

Then, three mooths after the competition deadline had passed. Dr. Thornton asked permission to submit an entry. The drawing of it that is published in the history books shows a sedate, carefully detailed Palladian structure of two identical wings for the House and Senate, linked by a domed center with a colonnaded porch. Jefferson, who was then secretary of state, was delighted. Historians just assumed that the west side, fronting the Mall, would be identical. Thorntoo's West Front was thought to have been an alternative design. But if it was not part of the actual, approved design. Lowry asked himself, why are the stakes for the central portion so far out? He searched some more.

Another Thorntoo drawing turned up, a watercolor sketch, showing the architect's concept for the whole building. It is a rather whirnsical confection—a temple with a prominent round protrusion, ringed with terraces and columns, in front of it and a domed pavilioo oo top. The central portion backing it is plain and square and has two wings that match the familiar East Front wings.

There is also a floor plan of this design.

Thornton's description clearly labels the large, round-space as the Conference Room and shows the spacious President's Apart-ment a few steps above the House and Senate chambers in the wings.

What was contemplated here was ohviously a predominance of joint House and Senate sessions with the president in charge,

Senate sessions with the president in charge, much as the king of France was in charge and occupied an office in the oew National Assembly building.

What was designed here became the prototype for virtually all state capitols in the United States and many parliaments throughout the world; a round, domed contemporary with private on either side. centerpiece, with wings oo either side.

And what this scheme recalled in Lowry's mind was the simplified ground plan L'Enfant bad drawn into his layout of the city and which his surveyor, Maj. Andrew Ellicott, had engraved. We have all seen this official plan of the federal city. The flont also at the L'Enfant because the least because the layout of the city and which has been because the layout of the city and which his surveyor, Maj. drawing of the stakes Lowry had found.
It stands to reason, then, that L'Enfant had made designs for the Capitol and the White House in some state of readiness. We know for a fact that he fully expected to be commissioned to design both huildings.

But he was fired before the planning of the city came to the point of huilding design. L'Enfant left Washington early io 1792. The competition for the Capitol and White House designs was announced several mooths later. It is possible, bowever, that io expectation of the commission. L'Enfant had already started preliminary work on the two huildings. Hence the stakes.

L'Enfant left his grand design amid utter confusion and hitter intrigue. He took some of his papers with him and many of them were stolen or have otherwise disappeared. He never gave a clear account of his work or why he was dismissed. why he was dismissed.

As construction of the Capitol showly progressed, handicapped by feuding archi-tects, constant shortages of funds and workmen, and British torches, the imperial as-

McAward, the passenger, said that he had asked for a seat in the consmoking section of an American Airlines plane but was told no more such seats were available. flight attendant to change a row of smoking-section seats to no-smoking, hut other passengers who wished to smoke objected. Then, said McAward, he told the attendant to instruct the captain to taxi the plane back to the gate. The pilot did so, but McAward refused to budge from his seat. The state police moved in and McAward was charged with interfering with a flight. He pleaded oot guilty.

Vernon and Arletta Hammett of Los Angeles have been ordered to pay $15,000 for placing an ad in a spouse-swapping oewspaper and signing it with the names of their uncle and aunt. A Superior Court judge has ordered them to pay the money in damages to Wyatt and Trula Haworth of La Mirada, a retired couple in their 60s. The ad in tired couple in their 60s. The ad in Swing newspaper in 1973 described the Haworths as "the original swingers," and invited those interested in "fun times" to "call Wyatt and Trula," the libel and slander suit charged. The Haworths said that as a result of the ad they received many offensive letters and above calls and they had to move phooe calls, and they had to move from their home. "It got to the point where every time the phone would ring, he'd start cussing and I would start crying," Mrs. Haworth complained.

Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis has planted a tree dedicated to her first husband, the late President John F. Kennedy, io a memorial forest io the Judean Hills outside Jerusalem, Mrs. Ooassis, on her first trip to Israel, is there at the invitation of Karl Katz, an American Jew and a founder of the Museum of the Jewish Diaspora, which opened this week. When she arrived Sunday, she said that she came on a very private visit and threatened to leave immediately if she were hounded by the press. Nevertheless, she has been followed by swarms of photographers during much of her stay. The Kennedy memorial, built on

For richer or poorer, Nick Noite who became a Hollywood star in the "Rich Man, Poor Man" televi-Once the airliner moved out toward sion series, has married Sharon the runway, he said, he asked a Haddad. The 37-year-old star of the movie "The Deep" and Miss Haddad, a 22-year-old singer, were married last Wednesday, but the marriage was kept secret until Tuesday The wedding took place at a change in Las Vegas, Nev., and the couple left immediately for France, where Nolte's newest film, "Walk in the Rain," is being shown at the Cannes Film Festival.

> He has "had" the Washington cocktail-dinner party-reception cir-cuit, and he is retiring from it, says. Rep. Paul Simon, D-Ill. Simon said that he usually received about 10 invitations to social affairs a day, along with at least one leuer reproviog him for not showing up at some previous function. So, he has devised a form reply to invita-tions that reads in part: "I like people as much as anyone else. I enjoy visiting. But it became obvious to me that while it was pleasant visiting little of a constructive nature was being accomplished." Simon said he does not want close friends to think he has sworn off dining with them, but added. The dinners I attend will be because I want to and rarely will they be organiza-tional functions—and it will be unusual to fiod me at a reception."

The feuding parties to the inheri-tance of deceased opera star Maria Callas have agreed to auction the singer's valuables and share the profits. Callas family friends in Atheos have said. The contesting sides—the singer's ex-husband, Giovanni Battista Meneghini, on the ooe band and her mother and sister on the other—have settled for an auctioo to take place June 24 at the George V hotel in Paris, the friends said. The sources said that up for auction will be most items in the Paris apartment of the soprano, ranging from her piano, to valuable paintings, to her kitchen pots and pans. The hotel confirmed the auc-
